This decision may be changed at any time. Requests for a change must be received in writing and bear the candidate's signature and a date. Changes will be implemented prospectively only on future reports, not reports already sent to law schools. Test scores from tests taken under nonstandard conditions—that is, extra time on a scored section of the test—are reported individually, and will not be averaged with any standard time scores or other nonstandard time scores that an examinee might have achieved. Percentile ranks of nonstandard test scores are not available and will not be reported. Law schools are informed when a candidate tests under nonstandard time conditions.
